Senior Technical Architect

Technical Architect

Right now, we are looking for an experienced Technical Architect within Financial Services industry, e.g. banking or insurance.

Architects in Accenture help our clients design advanced, secure and robust platforms and solutions to obtain and maintain control over their business processes and IT landscape. They combine architectural and technical expertise with functional understanding to create value for our clients.

Role Description: Technical Architect

The successful candidate will operate in a Technology Architecture role in a systems delivery or consulting environment. The candidate will have the responsibility for the technical direction of high impact / highly available solutions, delivery of complex technical components, and a relentless focus on the delivery of high quality work products.

A portion of the role is comprised of communication with clients of varying seniority. The role requires strong written and verbal communication skills, with the successful candidate demonstrating a delivery track record of complex technology solutions in a client-facing environment.

Key responsibilities include

- Engagement with business and IT users in analysing and defining non-functional requirements and associated technology solutions
- Responsible for performing assessments of existing systems and making recommendations for future directions
- Responsible for the review and introduction of new technology solutions that are medium to complex in nature and setting technical direction.
- Design, Build and Test of components that are medium to complex in nature, including delivery of new technical architecture components.
- Managing issues and risks, with escalation to client / Accenture management as required.
- Support development teams as required to ensure successful delivery of projects, particularly when introducing new technologies
- Project management, estimation and status reporting under area of responsibility to Accenture and / or client management team.
- Provide coaching and mentoring to junior resources.
